

STUDENT - CDU ACQUISITION FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

1. What is the management and operational relationship between ICHM and CDU

ICHM Pty Ltd remains an independent, incorporated company under the Companies Act. It is owned by CDU Amenities (Charles Darwin University) and not by the Lipman family.

ICHM remains a Higher Education Provider registered by TEQSA with programs accredited by TEQSA.

CDU will have membership on the College Council and Academic Board.

2. Will the change in ownership make any difference to my study program?

No, the curriculum and award offerings will remain the same.

3. Will my qualification be bestowed by Charles Darwin University or ICHM?

Qualifications will continue to be awarded by ICHM.

4. What difference will this make to my experience studying with ICHM?

You should not notice any short-term change to your experience in studying with ICHM, however, CDU is cognisant of the potential for growth and development of our programs.

5. Will there be any change to my Fee Structure?

ICHM remains a Higher Education provider independent from CDU and, as such, the only changes will be those under standard business arrangements.

6. Are there any changes to management proposed?

ICHM will continue to operate under current management arrangements, with Mr Gerald Lipman continuing in his role as Chief Executive.

7. What are CDU's plans for ICHM

CDU's strengths in hospitality and tourism mean that there are obvious synergies with ICHM, and our on-line capacity in business and management programs add new opportunities to develop capabilities in these sectors, which will benefit students.

8. What's special about Charles Darwin University?

CDU, which has its headquarters in Darwin in the Northern Territory, operates 11 campuses and centres throughout the Territory and in Sydney and Melbourne. It is ranked by Times Higher Education among the world's top 300 universities.
